A Year Since You've Gone* It's been a year since you've been gone, it seems it can't be real, still looking for your face each day while knowing you have gone away, you've slipped away where I can't see my precious Christy dear, I fear I'll lose the feeling of your presence being here. Afraid to go without your voice, afraid I'll never have you near. There is a part of you and me together for eternity, in God's hand is where you are, in that same hand is me. God joined our hearts together in His love right from the start, so we can know we're joined in Him and never really be apart. It seems to be a mystery what keeps our love this way, it's God's own love in Jesus Christ and He will never go away, so though you've gone where I can't see I live in hope to see your smile, for Jesus bought this victory if I'll be patient for awhile...I love you forever Christy, Love, Mom July 21, 2014

My name is George Of the family of Hoopais. It is a big shock to hear that a wonderful yet most precious jewel has been taken because her duty here was faithfully completed. I am honored to be given such a prize possession to share my heart my love my soul with but having such a life of harmony and memories so saturated with the expression of being satisfied it could never come close to or override that last few conversation and heart felt words of GODS daughter reaching the heights of her mission here on a gloomy world. I heard JOY and PEACE LOVE and CARE for the first time from a child of GOD given destined light who stared death in it's face and said I'm not afraid to go. She expressed to me in evidence the essence and aroma of GODS very heart. She said that I was her hero her counselor her guardian I doubt that because my greatest teacher that taught me more in a short span of her golden life have given me answers encouragement faith and a heart to live. I will always remember this Chris that you wanted to give me a church to run well you have given me more then a church but a reason to live. CUThenJust me your faithful student George
